Cardiovascular Complication

Co-enzyme Q 10 : Content of ubiquinol (co-enzyme Q10) in human LDL affords protection against the oxidative modifications of LDL themselves, thus lowering their atherogenic potency.

A meta-analysis concluded that co-enzyme Q10 has the potential in hypertensive patients to lower systolic blood pressure by up to 17mm Hg and diastolic blood pressure by up to 10mm Hg without significant side-effects.

Green Tea Extract : Green tea ext. exhibit stronger antioxidant protection for human body than vitamin C and vitamin E.

Green tea ext. show inhibitory effects on cancer cells, block the cell cycle of cancer cells (cytotoxicity) and induce programmed cell death.

Lycopene : Lycopene is one of the most potent antioxidant, prevent carcinogenesis and atherogenesis by protecting critical biomolecules including lipids, low-density lipoproteins (LDL), proteins and DNA.

Oral Lycopene have a role for the management of idiopathic male infertility by showing maximum improvement occur in the mobility followed by concentration.
